What people say about this book

Carole Carlsbad, "and disappointed that is the last of her inspiring and joyful Read all her previous books and this is also outstanding in my opinion. Bought the Kindle version and didn't check the book's length - was surprised how short the book is, and disappointed that is the last of her inspiring and joyful books. Still, do read this one after you read all her previous books. Surprisingly I am a member of her home parish - don't know her, but love her take on faith and honesty of her walk in that walk."

Sr Clare Benedicta cos, "Down to earth ... living ones spirituality. This is truly a honest and humble reflection of the author's perseverance in striving to live her rule of life in the world that can and does speak to all, both secular and religious . I couldn't help but snicker or smile to myself seeing parts of my own younger self in her words."

me, "Well written and poignant. The section on the necessity of perseverance after a fall was particularly helpful to me: "What makes our life pleasing to God is not what we accomplish but how sincerely we try.""
